What does our partnership look like?

The North East London Teaching Partnership (NELTP) is made up of eight partners, including six London boroughs and two universities. These are:

- London Borough of Barking and Dagenham
- London Borough of Havering
- London Borough of Newham
- London Borough of Redbridge
- London Borough of Tower Hamlets
- London Borough of Waltham Forest
- London Metropolitan University
- University of East London

The NELTP has been funded by the Department for Education since 2018 to improve standards in the social work workforce in the region. However, the local authorities have been working together for more than 15 years to provide innovative support for continuous development to social workers and enhance student learning by exchanging knowledge between working social workers and educators in universities.

Domestic abuse support in the workplace

[PODCAST] WHAT WORKPLACES CAN DO TO PROVIDE SUPPORT TO ADULTS AND CHILDREN EXPERIENCING DOMESTIC ABUSE

Witnessing or experiencing domestic abuse can have a detrimental effect on a child's mental, physical and economic wellbeing. By recognising when an employee or colleague is experiencing domestic abuse, professionals working in any sector can help keep children safe.

In this podcast episode, domestic abuse experts from the NSPCC Helpline discuss what you can do to support and safeguard colleagues who experience domestic abuse. To watch the full episode, please click HERE
